Is it appropriate to send young drug-users to prison?

With the increase of the use of drugs especially between the teenagers and younger people, these days this issue concerns many governments and society groups. Although, many individuals believe that jail could prevent and control this problem; from my point of view, prison (to prison) them entirely has an adversely (adverse) effect on addicts and drug-users.

Initially, the family always plays a major role in their life and decisions. Relations, loves and mental co-operative (co-operation) between members of family can make a secure place for children and youth people in family to refrain from drugs and immoral behaviors.

Second reason which I mention at here, relate to education. Education in this regard, has to persistence and effective, in primary school up to university. Other popular communication devices could well help to this matter. Namely: TV, Radio, Movies, Newspaper and even Books.

Last but not least, young people need hobby and they have to fill them up with positive and moral activities. They have to spend their energy beneficial and with plan for instance in clubs, Gyms and sport complexes. In my country, Iran, the neglect in creation of suitable place for young people causes many of them to be attracted to drugs. Therefore, they prefer to fill their pleasure time with illegal drugs.

In sum, Iranian people have a great nice proverb "Prevention is better than Cure". I strongly believe that prison never helps the drug-users. We need to prevent them and find fundamental solutions for such a drastic problem.
