

What are some important qualities of a good supervisor (boss)? Use specific details and examples to explain why these qualities are important.

Every one wants to be a boss but there are only a few people who can achieve this position and also get the title of a good boss. Technically, it is difficult to describe an outstanding supervisor or boss in words. However, I will do my best, to describe a great boss, from my personal opinion, below.

At the very first sight it might seem to be the easiest job ever; sitting down and watching other people to pursue your commands. However, in real world, leading a team or different groups of staff is a really difficult and breath-taking responsibility of any boss because rather than being well-educated and having sufficient knowledge about what to do, you will need to have talent, self-confidence, patience and the ability of managing people and plans in critical situations. Once your employees exceed thousands, handling their issues is no longer an easy job and demand a man of resilience and self-esteem.

Moreover, keeping every aspect of job under control and satisfying both workforces and customers, is something that only an experienced boss can handle it. Though, in other words, having so many years of work experience, having a good understanding of work areas, plus being serious and committed are some other features of a great supervisor.

To conclude, there are so many feature that you need to have them innately—from the first days of your nature life-- and also those that you must acquire over the years, to make an exceptional boss.
