Do you like to travel alone or with friends/ family?

I would wait for friends. Sorry but the world is not the safest place. And there is safety in numbers. If problems arise you have someone there to have your back. I have not traveled extensively, and still not alone.

I don't mind traveling alone. If I had the money to travel, it wouldn't bother me to venture out on my own. I'm pretty independent. I don't mind doing things with friends or family, but I don't like to be tied to someone else's schedule all the time. I walk faster and may have different interests, like my current obsession over kid`s animated movies.

I've never traveled alone before, unless it's for business trips. My parents would never let me travel alone haha! And i probably am too scared to do that, I need some companion! I love to travel with both family and friends. With friends you can do just about anything haha. But with family most of your expenses will be covered lol. Both make great companions and you can have incredible experiences together.

I have, but not without incident. I was cautious and prepared, but I did learn that what people say is true that there are people who essentially lie in ambush waiting and watching for a chance to harm or take advantage of people who travel alone. I enjoyed traveling alone despite the perils, but that was a long time ago and the world was different then. It is better to go alone than with a stupid friend (not that you have any of those!), but if you can find a smart friend with like interests it is much safer to go in pairs. Even then, one wants to be well-prepared and very, very careful.

I don't like traveling alone and I like traveling with a friend. It will be happier and besides you need someone to take photos for you. But there is an exception. Long time ago after a breakup, I did travel alone for a week. I needed to go to a place that nobody knew me and therefore I might feel calm. It was a sad experience. After that, I never travel alone.

I don't think I'd make a good solo traveler, esp. to another country: I tend to not be very good at striking up conversations with strangers. I also can't be bothered with translating services. I'd prefer to go to a country with someone, or to go to a country where I know someone, but the places I'd like to go I don't have those options. So I may end up going to some other countries by myself, or maybe with a tour if I could find a group that's not too much like the traditional group tour.
