

The chart illustrates the amount spent on six consumer goods in Germany, Italy, France and Britain,

According to the chart Britain spend more than 160 thousand pounds on photographic film, toys and compact disks and exactly 160000 pounds on perfumes. Tennis racquets and personal stereos have received the same portion of money by 157 thousand pounds.

France, Italy and Germany's budgets for these goods fluctuate between 140 and 160 thousand of pounds (standing in second level after Britain). However, (in only one case) this amount exceeds 160 thousand by France spending on photographic film.

To conclude, as the chart shows British government has got the leading place in spending money on consumer goods.

Comment:

In describing such a graph , you could focus either on the 4 countries or on the consumer products. In this sample the writer has focused on the four countries as it is ore viable. Never the less, there are some points:

- 1- Fils, toys and CDs do not share the same Value.
- 2- How one could guess that the value for Sterio is 157?
- 3- The second Paragraph is TOO genral and needs more elaboration and expansion.
